

Abstract

Small and Medium Enterprises are among the essential pillars of the economic development. This appears in the considerable participation they have in the national revenue. Besides the fact that they do attract a great deal of labour force. In addition to their capacity to activate the forward and backward linkages of industry. Accordingly, Foreign Direct Investment is considered as a canal to boost the performance of small and medium enterprises, due to its several advantages. On that basis, the economic situation of Algeria provides a clear preparation of the investment climate to attract more and more foreign capital.
